ALERT NOTIFICATION SYSTEMS AND FUNCTIONS IN MILWAUKEE COUNTY

National Warning System (NAWAS)

NAWAS is a nationwide private telephone communications system funded by the Federal Emergency Management Agency. It operates on three levels of government: Federal, State and Local. The system has network nodes located at strategic locations in each state. States, in turn, coordinate a system connecting system nodes in various counties. The primary warning point for Milwaukee County is the Wisconsin State Patrol and is monitored on a 24-hour basis.

National Weather Service (NWS)

Current weather information and warnings are received over the NAWAS and internet computer products. Radio broadcasts are received over the NOAA weather radio broadcasting from Missoula, MT.

911 Emergency Communications Center

The 911 Emergency System is a locally operated telephone system capable of receiving emergency information from the public and disseminating such information to the various emergency response agencies, such as police, fire, and EMS units within the local area.

Outdoor Warning System

Milwaukee County has a continuous 24-hour warning system. The primary warning system in Milwaukee County is the outdoor siren system. These sirens are owned, in part, by the County or municipalities. Milwaukee County strongly encourages its citizens to purchase NOAA weather alert radios.

The Milwaukee County 911 Emergency Dispatch Center has the capability to activate the sirens in communities that do not have local dispatching. Additionally, warning signals for Milwaukee County follow the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) guidelines.

School Warning System

Some schools in Milwaukee County maintain NOAA weather alert radios. Milwaukee County strongly encourages all schools to purchase NOAA weather alert radios.

Flood Warning System

The National Weather Service has a network of rain and river gauges that are strategically placed on regional rivers and collect data for flood warning purposes. These gauges have automatic alarms that warn of threatening flood conditions and conditions are reported to the National Weather Service in Sullivan, Wisconsin.

SkyWarn

Project SkyWarn is a national program designed to place personnel in the field to spot and track severe weather and Milwaukee County participates in the program. These field personnel are trained by the National Weather Service in basic severe weather meteorology, and in how and what to report to the proper officials. During periods of severe weather, the spotters are dispatched to the field and relay reports to the NWS or the EOC. If the EOC is activated, it disseminates the appropriate warning.

Emergency Alert System (EAS)

The Emergency Alert System is composed of AM, FM and TV broadcast stations and non-government industry utilities operating on an organized basis during emergencies at national, state, and local levels. It provides for the alerting of participating stations, dissemination of standardized emergency information, and/or termination of non-emergency station activities until the emergency subsides.

The FCC, in conjunction with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Weather Service (NWS), implements the EAS at the federal level. The President has sole responsibility for determining when the EAS will be activated at the national level and has delegated this authority to the Director of FEMA. The EAS provides an official means for supplying emergency information to the public. Local radio and television broadcast stations participate in EAS based upon a contractual agreement between the station and the FCC.

Authentication and Issuance:

- NWS authenticates by calling back and confirming message with the designated official or dispatch.
- NWS enters and sends out the message, activates EAS and broadcasts message over NOAA weather radio.
- Broadcasters receive message from NWS and can automatically broadcast the message over the radio and television networks, even those that are unattended.
- NOAA weather radios automatically alarm.

Print Media and Electronic Media

When time is sufficient, warnings and emergency information are provided through the print and electronic media, and the Office of Emergency Management's web page.

Neighborhood Warning Procedures

In some instances, additional warning must be provided to certain areas. Methods used include, but not limited to, vehicle mounted public address and door-to-door warning.

Law enforcement and fire service vehicles, which are equipped with sirens and/or public address systems, will augment fixed warning devices.

Amateur Radio Network (ARES/RACES)

This network provides a means to disseminate emergency public protection messages to various local and statewide amateur users and groups.

This system provides a vital radio communication link between the EOC and local governments throughout the state.

IPAWS - Integrated Public Alert Warning System

IPAWS is a public notification system intended to alert residents to emergency weather, road closings, public safety advisories, and natural or man-made disasters through mobile telephone text messaging. The authorized administrators are Law Enforcement and the Office of Emergency Management.

Emergency Preparedness Notification System (EPNS)

EPNS is operated by Intrado, a corporation that provides 911 operations support system services to incumbent local exchange carriers, competitive local exchange carriers and wireless carriers. The EPNS system is activated via web interface or by calling their emergency call relay center. EPNS calls the phone lines identified in the 911 database within a specified geographic area. EPNS is also capable of utilizing pre-loaded calling lists.

511 System

The Wisconsin Department of Transportation operates a traveler advisory system accessible by calling 511. The system can be used to advise motorists on state highways of travel related information or warnings.

Systems Testing

Components of the warning system are tested on a regular basis, some daily, weekly, or monthly.
